

GOLD CONTROLS PRICES.

Its Production Factor in High Cost of Living, Says Burton.

In an address this afternoon before section 1, the economic and educational section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, on "The Cause of High Prices," Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio said it was impossible to solve the problem without an understanding of the following fundamental facts:

"Scientific progress has multiplied the stock of useful articles and the facilities of modern life. This has made possible a constantly rising standard of living.

"This progress is unequal in different branches of human endeavor, and causes some prices to rise while others fall. The most marked contrast is between the production of gold, the supply of which is rapidly increasing, and agricultural products. The latter have not kept pace with other objects of consumption.

"One inevitable result of progress is overproduction in various lines and a consequent degree of waste and extravagance. He gave illustrations of increased prices in progressive eras. In each of these there was a great increase in the production of gold. The same condition now is in evidence with the additional fact that gold is now more generally used as a basis for credit upon which so large a share of modern business is transacted. Thus the increased quantity of gold is the principal factor in the present situation.

A potent reason for high prices, he said, is to be found in methods of distribution, many of which are wasteful.

The probable overworking of the problem, he said, will be found in diminished relative production of gold, greater attention to agriculture, the more perfect regulation of great organizations of capital and a more careful conservation of our natural resources.

Samuel H. Barker, financial editor of the Philadelphia North American, spoke on the increased cost of living and the need for an international commission to investigate this question and devise a money system based on something else than the arbitrary value of gold.

MANY CHEMISTS HERE.

Registration Largest in History of the American Society.

Those in charge of the registration at the meeting of the American Chemical Society, at McKinley Manual Training High School, said today that 640 delegates had registered up to noon. More than 250 are expected to attend the banquet tonight at Rauscher's. The registration, it was stated, was more than 150 in excess of that at any previous meeting of the society.

Today's program included sessions of the divisions of agricultural and food chemistry, rubber chemistry, pharmaceutical, industrial, biological chemistry, chemical engineers, physical and inorganic chemistry, with a joint meeting of the American Chemical Society and the American Society of Biological Chemists. A symposium on "Mineral Wastes and Conservation," participated in by the division of industrial chemistry and chemical engineers, was held this afternoon as a "special order." The topics were: "Carbon Waste," J. A. Holmes; (a) "Zinc Losses in Brass Manufacturing," (b) "Need of Special Alloys for Special Uses," W. H. Bassett; "Losses of Combined Nitrogen," B. D. Pennock; "New Uses of Reducible Nitrogen," W. R. Whittey; "Wastes in the Ceramic Industry," A. V. Bleibinger; "The Abuse of Brandy," A. D. Little; "Waste and Conservation of Potash and Phosphoric Acid," F. K. Cameron; "Sulphur Fumes and Fine Dust," F. G. Wattell; "Miscellaneous Mineral Wastes," Charles L. Parsons.

ADVOCATES TAYLOR SYSTEM.

Should Be Applied to Teachers as Well as Working Men.

At this morning's session of the section on education of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at the Willard Hotel Dr. A. O. Norton, professor of education at Harvard, advocated the application of the Taylor efficiency system to the science of teaching.

"Get a definite stunt for the teacher, the same as for the workman," he said, "and then see that the teacher performs the task." Dr. Norton spoke of the necessity for making efficiency under actual working conditions, rather than as laboratory experiments, and said that the best results must be obtained by experience, aided by research.

"Everything we do in educational matters today is no more and no less than guesswork," he declared. Advocates of the scientific method of education say that the best results are obtained by systematic study and knowledge of the person to be educated. "But," said Dr. Norton, "scientific research lacks the fullness and the concreteness of actual experience. The scientific method is, at best, only a bridge to an extremely small pedagogical mouse."

Dr. Norton gave the results of experiments made in the elementary schools at Cambridge, where a class of forty pupils, in the first year, was divided into two sections, one section being taught in the forenoon, the other in the afternoon. He stated that the year's work was completed in half time under this method.

A. S. Courtis, director of mathematics in the public schools of Detroit, exhibited an interesting set of charts showing the average accomplishments of the pupils in the elementary schools all over the country. The charts, of course, showed extremes high and low, but the general averages were strikingly similar.

TEXTILE STANDARDS URGED.

Discussions by American Home Economics Association.

At the "round table" of the American Home Economics Association at Henry D. Cooke School this morning Miss Claudia Q. Murphy of New York City scored women in general for their bargain-hunting proclivities.

Miss Martha Van Rensselaer of Cornell University urged that the association place itself on record in favor of a law for pure textiles, modeled along the lines of the pure food and drugs law, and the resolutions committee was instructed to prepare a suitable resolution to this effect, and to co-operate with the home economics committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in securing presentation of the bill to Congress for the establishment of standards in textiles and to prevent the adulteration of silks by weighting and other goods by mixture of cheaper materials.

The round table discussion, led by Miss Anna Houston, Crake of the College of Industrial Arts, Denton, Tex., was on domestic art instruction for college students, more than a score of speakers taking part in the discussion. This was followed by a business session, and at 12:30 the members were entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Gordon. The afternoon's session, opening at 3:30, dealt with the general subject of school rooms, and several extremely interesting papers were scheduled for presentation.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Richard W. Delaney Accused of Collecting Money Without Authority.

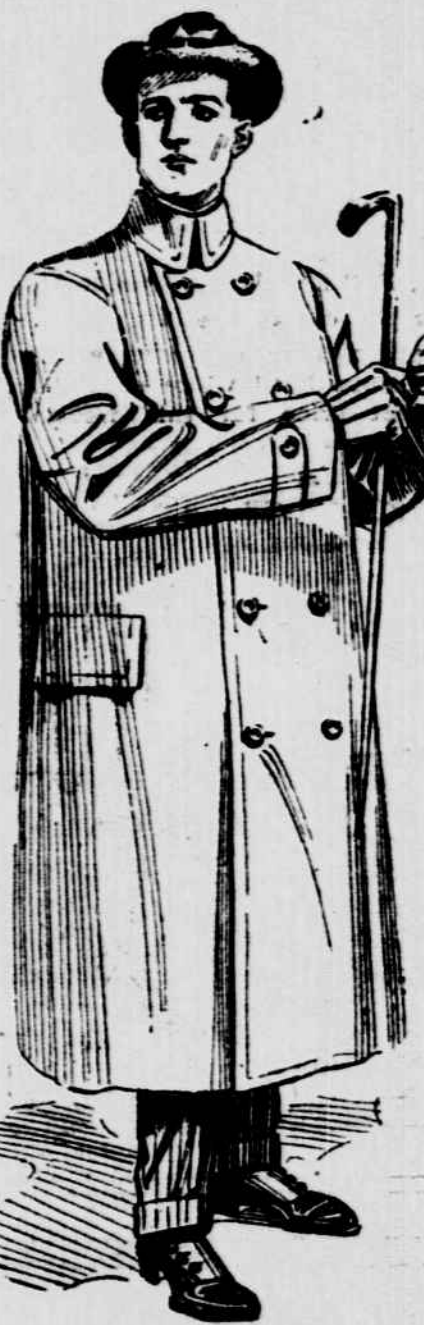

Richard W. Delaney, telegraph operator, was held for the action of the grand jury and committed to jail in default of $500 bond by Judge Pugh in Police Court today on his own admission. It is said, that Wednesday he obtained $5, the receipts of the Postal Telegraph Company's branch in Union station by representing himself as a telegraph company employee who had been sent as a substitute for the regular collector.

Delaney says he was hard up and needed money. He told the police where he had the money and the police held it for him. He is the father of ten children and was formerly a tower operator on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.
